The eggy smell you described has to be caused by one of 4 things; 1. Smell coming back through the drain, indicating that there is no water trap easiest way to check this would be to disconnect the drain hose from the wall, smell the drain and see if it is the same smell or not. If so, install a water trap, or arrange the drain hose in a loop to form one. Decomposing organic matter in the wet system. Bosch wfd2473 washing machine wont drain or spin The machine goes. I get a gravelly sound from my bosch wfd2473 washing machine. WFD 2073 wfd 2072 bosch washer. There could have been something in a pocket or that accidentally got in with the laundry that has somehow got stuck somewhere possibly in a filter but also limescale can trap dirt in the system and various items can get stuck in all sorts of places. This can be solved nearly always by running through the cleaning procedure described on this link; if it doesnt work the first time try it again sometimes it can take a couple of tries but nearly always works great. There are also stronger chemicals than vinegar that you can use to clean the machine with, but they should only be used in extreme circumstances as other components can be degraded white vinegar is usually all you need. To remove the vinegar smell afterwards if necessary put a teaspoon or two of baking soda through the machine on an empty hot wash. Decomposing organic matter in the dryer outlet duct or possibly in the lint filter area, but unlikely, also possibly under the machine up inside where the workings are rodents and insects and moss and funghi etc all love the warm moist air that comes out of the dryer and they always can find a way into the duct something dies or poops in the duct and the smell can be unbearable easy way to check this is to look in the duct if you can, and see if the smell gets worse if you have the dryer on. Clean the duct out with mild dilute bleach if this is the problem.

Some liquid detergents cause a build up slowly in the system that smell quite sewagelike possibly some powders too, but not so common try cleaning out the machine and switching to a different detergent to check if thats the case. Unfortunately the Bosch website manuals page is down today they will have a manual for your model almost certainly it is an excellent site; try again in a day or two and you should get a user guide downloaded. An overheating motor is unlikely to be the cause of this smell, eggy is not associated with motor or electronic overheating problems. Hope this helps, if you cant cure the smell with these tips, then unfortunately the machine has to be taken apart and the offending item cleaned out if you fancy trying this yourself then please ask again and we could talk you through it, Good luck. Chk out these It seems the the bad smell comes from the motor. It could be because of a problem with the motor itself or because of a friction that cause the motor to warm up. Reason for this friction could be a piece of clothing that get between the clothes tub and the outer tub that holds the water. But only you can decide, if youre able to unplug the thing and take it apart. If youve had no experience doing this I would take the unit to a repair place for an estimate first. You can run the motor for a short while; get it off the wall socket, feel the motor to see if it has overheated. Posted on Apr 14, 2007.
