Was told it was a good tank but crap instructions, which I fully agree with. The only trouble I have got is the skimmer, the cup at the top of the skimmer is empty but the section inside of it is half full of water because I have turned the air valve but when I open the vale which has the white stuff coming up it bubbles all over is this normal. If not how can I rectify the problem. Im worried that I havent set this up right so would be so grateful for any help. Finally should the sponge filter be put under the skimmer where it was in the box or shoudl it go under the bioballs. Many Thanks Welsh Reef Was told it was a good tank but crap instructions, which I fully agree with. Well, would have been a good idea to get the water up to temp.If not how can I rectify the problem. Im worried that I havent set this up right so would be so grateful for any help. Ok, you dont need the skimmer yet as you have nothing in there to skim. However, dont panic just needs a little playing with until you get the right result.Ditch all sponges and bio balls and noodles replace with, Live rock rubble and rowophos Many Thanks Have you read the many 550 set up threads and journals on here. Mine and my sisters is our journey to the salty side Welsh ReefOr just in the tank itself also the same with rubble. Hoping someday to get 2 clownfish amongst other things. Tiger we initally used tap but have now put RO in to top it up. For LR you want some nice sized pieces in the tank as this will be your filtration and you will attach corals to it. You will also want some rubble, very small pieces in the back of the tank to replace biobalss and noodles, these can be nitrate traps. You ideally want a nitrate and phosphate reading as close to 0 as possible.<http://www.tyros-club.de/userfiles/cost-accounting-solution-manual.xml>

In the back compartment you will also want a carbon and phosphate remover, Rowaphos is the best. I can thoroughly recommend reading Seffie and Trods Journal as it really is a wealth of information on starting up a reef, and as it is the same tank, will help you considerably. Also, if you could answer the question on what you are hoping to achieve, types of coral, fish, inverts etc, we will be able to help you more. I would take out the water and place what LR you have in there whilst you are swapping out the water. As you want shrimp and snails, unless you do this, they would die on you. In a tank that small you will not be able to keep a yellow tang, they need at least 75 gallons. Flasher should be ok, I have a filamented, beautiful fish. Pictures are always good Lastly, the LFS gave you wrong advice, you wont need the stress coat at all. Do you have a powerhead in the main display. Is your spray bar pointing to the surface Seffie x You will need to get this back up to temp and then add salt again. As you want shrimp and snails, unless you do this, they would die on you. In a tank that small you will not be able to keep a yellow tang, they need at least 75 gallons. Flasher should be ok, I have a filamented, beautiful fish. Pictures are always good Lastly, the LFS gave you wrong advice, you wont need the stress coat at all. What rubble would you suggest for replacing the bioballs Do you have a powerhead in the main display. Is your spray bar pointing to the surface Seffie x The spray bar is pointing 90 degress to the right hand side of the tank should it be If you add any supplements, you need to test for them. On to testing, you really need to get the test kits yourself and test yourself. I would say to begin with pH, Ammonia, Nitrite and Nitrate, API are OK, Salifert are much better. You will probably need a supplemental powerhead for flow around the tank, Seffie will confirm this as she has that tank. For rubble, you just need however much seffie says not sure how much will fit of LR rubble, its the bits that fall off the main stuff, usually LFS will have some sitting in the bottom of their LR tank. As seffie says, how much do you have in the main tank now Oh indeed yes, dissolve the salt and test the SG before putting the live rock back If you add any supplements, you need to test for them. On to testing, you really need to get the test kits yourself and test yourself. I would say to begin with pH, Ammonia, Nitrite and Nitrate, API are OK, Salifert are much better. Yes, buy your own and get to know a bit about water chemistry Agree with Tina STOP using it now lfs are just trying to sell you stuff by the sounds of it You will probably need a supplemental powerhead for flow around the tank, Seffie will confirm this as she has that tank.

You MUST have a powerhead in the main display most go for a korallia 2 fleabay best price usually For rubble, you just need however much seffie says not sure how much will fit of LR rubble, its the bits that fall off the main stuff, usually LFS will have some sitting in the bottom of their LR tank. Yep, get enough to fill approx. Im out of this thread Seffie x SG, Ammonia, NitrIte, NitrAte and P.H We are here to help use us, there is an awful lot of experience on this forum, it would be a shame to waste it Contests including the Tank of the Month.
